PDF encrypt is a secure, free solution for encrypting multiple, single PDF files or document collections. It is a useful solution for organizations or individuals needing to protect document collections, protect documents from being copied or distributed by unauthorized users, or who need to protect certain documents from prying eyes within the organization. A typical distance measuring apparatus may be a distance measuring apparatus which uses a laser pulse. As the laser pulse, a pulse which is created by illuminating a laser beam on a predetermined measurement target such as a retroreflective tape or a retroreflective sheet, and by detecting a reflection light (return light) from a target surface of the measurement target, is used. The laser beam is emitted from a laser oscillator, and reaches the target surface through a telescope, an optical system which mainly comprises a beam splitter and a prism, and the like. The reflection light from the target surface is detected through a photodetector. The photodetector has a predetermined detection range. Therefore, if the target surface is located away from a predetermined position of the photodetector, the reflection light from the target surface does not enter into the photodetector. Thus, in this case, a distance to the target surface is calculated as a distance to the predetermined position of the photodetector. Then, the distance to the target surface is input to an arithmetic processing unit (arithmetic circuit) of a data processing apparatus. However, when the target surface is present in the vicinity of the photodetector and in the detection range of the photodetector, the reflection light from the target surface enters into the photodetector. In this case, the reflection light from the target surface reaches a position of the photodetector different from the predetermined position. Thus, the reflection light does not enter into the photodetector at a timing when the reflection light reaches the photodetector. Thus, the measurement accuracy of the distance to the target surface becomes insufficient. In order to improve the distance measuring accuracy, in the related art, when the target surface is present in the vicinity of the photodetector and in the detection range of the photodetector, a correction value is calculated based on a target distance and an incidence angle of the laser beam. Then, the laser beam is emitted from the laser oscillator, the reflection light from the target surface is detected b7e8fdf5c8
